THE MASSACHUSETTS CULTURAL COUNCIL is an independent agency of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts that grants public money to support the not-for-profit arts, humanities and interpretive sciences in the state.

The mission of the Council is to promote excellence, access, education and diversity in the arts, humanities and interpretive sciences in order to improve the quality of life for all Massachusetts residents, and to contribute to the economic vitality of our communities.

This support will allow us to continue to provide quality arts programming in many of our programs for children and youth.

message from the Governor

Dear Friends:

Culture plays an important role in the lives of every Massachusetts resident, from student to senior citizen. On behalf of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, it is an honor for me to introduce the 1998 Annual Report of the Massachusetts Cultural Council, an agency dedicated to the notion that the arts, sciences and humanities can build stronger, more vibrant communities.

For more than 30 years, Massachusetts has invested in artists, communities, schools and not-for-profit cultural institutions in every corner of the state. The state's investment in the Massachusetts Cultural Council is a vital down payment in building a better Commonwealth, rich in cultural opportunities and a high quality of life.

All of this is made possible by the talents of individuals and organizations who immerse themselves in the tasks that enrich our lives and communities, providing educational resources and opportunities—and a chance to reach one's fullest potential. In recent years, spurred by the recognition that culture is one of the engines driving the state's economy, those resources and opportunities have also been directed toward community and economic development.

I am proud of the important role played by the Massachusetts Cultural Council in uniting the public, private and philanthropic worlds in meeting our goal of making the Commonwealth a richer place in which to work and live.

Sincerely,

message from the leadership

Massachusetts is like a tapestry. No matter where you look, you find areas of striking beauty. Stepping back, the parts become a spectacular whole. Massachusetts is also a sum of its distinctive parts—our schools, our resources, both human and natural, our international reputation as a center for the arts, sciences and humanities—that come together to nurture creativity and to build an enviable quality of life.

Throughout its existence, the Massachusetts Cultural Council has proudly served as a common thread of this tapestry, investing an annual appropriation from the Legislature to help build strong, diverse communities.

Through a variety of competitive grant programs, the Council distributes grants to not-for-profit cultural organizations, schools, communities and working artists. The beneficiaries include a broad cross-section of our communities—students, “at-risk” youth, elders, people with disabilities, and individuals in every city and town across the Commonwealth.

Economically, the last few years have been good ones, both in Massachusetts and across America. That growth has helped the state to increase its support for the arts, humanities and interpretive sciences. But the Massachusetts Cultural Council’s increased budget allocation reflects more than a random gift from a good economy: it reflects the reality that the not-for-profit cultural industry has become one of the cornerstones of the Commonwealth’s economy and one of the leading contributors to the quality of our lives.

Not-for-profit cultural programs have an annual economic impact of $2.56 billion, and employ more than 45,300 people. Combined audience attendance for Massachusetts cultural organizations exceeded 45 million in 1992—almost eight times the state’s total population. Attendance at just three Boston museums surpassed the combined total attendance for the Red Sox, Bruins and Celtics.

To help meet its important economic role, the Council has joined in partnerships with public, private and philanthropic organizations to leverage additional investments that focus on helping to build the bricks and mortar of community as well as to nourish its soul.

In the pages that follow, we will spell out in greater detail how six consecutive appropriation increases from the Governor and Legislature have made it possible for us to launch nationally recognized programs such as the YouthReach Initiative; how schools, parents and the business community have been brought together through the Education Partnership Initiative; how culture is being used as a building block for communities through the Cultural Economic Development Program and the Massachusetts Cultural Facilities Project.

In the coming years, our goal is to continue to build and nurture relations among the public, private and philanthropic communities, to fulfill our mission to promote the excellence, access, education and diversity that make Massachusetts.

culture is vital to our lives

In 1997, 50 percent of the nation's adult population participated in the arts, with museum-going and musical plays among the most popular activities. According to the National Endowment for the Arts Survey of Public Participation in the Arts, interest is also on the rise for performances of classical music, dance, jazz, ballet and opera.

The continued rapid growth of technology requires a firm foundation in the sciences and mathematics for all Americans, especially our younger ones.

Programs that advance understanding, appreciation and participation in the sciences serve to fuel the nation's economy and foster greater appreciation for the natural resources that provide our jobs and improve our quality of life.

The search for community is also the domain of the humanities. History, literature, philosophy and other disciplines provide us with the appreciation of our past, the language and the ideas and insights out of which any sense of common purpose must emerge. Public humanities programs in libraries, museums and theaters, in our schools and on radio and television, provide opportunities for the citizens of our state to search for and find community.

Culture is also vital for our children. Studies and experience have demonstrated that students' cognitive skills development are aided by the inclusion of arts in comprehensive programs. Massachusetts recognized the value of arts education by its inclusion in the curriculum frameworks mandated by the Education Reform Act of 1993.

culture as an economic investment

Massachusetts' abundant cultural resources are essential to the state's quality of life and are a major lure for businesses to locate in the state and to attract and retain employees. Cultural activities play a significant role in attracting 28 million tourists each year, helping to make tourism the state's third largest industry. In many communities and regions, culture has become a focus of economic development.

A 1996 study by Northeastern University found:

- Massachusetts is home to 3,029 not-for-profit arts, humanities and interpretive science organizations, 336 local cultural councils and thousands of artists and humanists.
- These cultural organizations had a $2.56 billion impact on the Massachusetts economy.
- Not-for-profit cultural organizations in the state employed more than 45,300 people.
- State income and sales tax withholding by not-for-profit cultural organizations totaled $17.3 million.
- Combined audience attendance of Massachusetts cultural organizations exceeded 45 million in 1996—almost eight times the state's total population.
- People attending cultural events spend money on meals, gas, tolls and other taxable items. Increased cultural programming means increases in related spending and state revenues.
- In 1992, attendance at just three Boston museums (the Museum of Fine Arts, Museum of Science and New England Aquarium) surpassed the total combined attendance of the Red Sox, Celtics and Bruins.

A thriving cultural industry helps create a quality of life appealing to businesses and families and strengthens communities.

DISCOVERY

Continued Growth Buoyed by six consecutive budget increases that brought the operating budget to $14.7 million—and successful implementation of the three-year strategic plan—the Massachusetts Cultural Council has extended its efforts to use arts and culture as a foundation for building communities. Through a streamlined Organizational Support program, 461 organizations received support in fiscal 1998, while support for 336 local cultural councils was augmented with the introduction of a Matching Incentive Program to leverage other public and private support.

Partnerships Using public funds to leverage private dollars, the Massachusetts Cultural Council has brought business and community leaders into partnership to improve our schools. The Education Partnership Initiative, launched in 1997, funded nine projects that bring together community leaders, schools, parents and cultural resource providers in a long-term commitment to permanently integrate the arts, humanities and sciences into schools' curricula. The 12 Science in the Community projects focused on serving "at-risk" youth and populations currently underrepresented in the sciences, particularly girls. These initiatives came on top of traditional efforts such as the Event & Residency Program.

Innovation The YouthReach Initiative, launched in 1994, expanded from 14 projects to 27 projects in 1997–98. The program also received the first annual Innovation Award from the National Assembly of State Arts Agencies. The award recognizes the program's ability to transform the lives of young people through community partnerships that provide out-of-school, in-depth arts programs. YouthReach and Science in the Community were also recognized by the President's Committee on the Arts and Humanities' "Coming Up Taller" awards. We also continue our partnership with Very Special Arts Massachusetts to provide mini-grants that enable people with disabilities to be creators and performers—not just audience members.

Economic Development The Cultural Economic Development Program was launched in fiscal 1997. The program recognizes that cultural assets can be used in innovative and entrepreneurial ways to stimulate economic activity in Massachusetts communities. Through multi-year seed funding, the Massachusetts Cultural Council creates partnerships that put culture at the center of community revitalization, business development or job creation efforts. Through the Massachusetts Cultural Facilities Project, a partnership with the New England Foundation for the Arts and the Nonprofit Facilities Fund, communities receive strategic and financial support in planning and developing new facilities.

In 1999, the Massachusetts Cultural Council will build on the innovative successes of the recent past. A $2.6 million increase in the fiscal year 1999 state appropriation will make it possible to have an even greater impact across a variety of programs. It will also make it possible to build upon the millions in other public and private money leveraged by cultural programs.

Impact and Growth The coming year will continue the growth and refinement of four signature efforts—the Education Partnership Initiative, YouthReach, Science in the Community and the Cultural Economic Development Program. It will enable the expansion of YouthReach to 39 projects and bring education partnerships to 12 communities. The fiscal 1999 appropriation will also make possible a 10 percent increase in Organizational Support and a 5 percent increase to local cultural councils. Increased financial support will be matched with additional technical assistance and the opportunity to bring partners together to share experiences and best practices.

Cultural Tourism New England's abundant cultural resources form the basis for an innovative partnership designed to raise the region's visibility as an international tourism destination. Working in conjunction with the Massachusetts Port Authority and the other five New England states, the Massachusetts Cultural Council will take the lead in the creation of a cultural tourism program designed to increase international tourism to the region.

Endowment Grant Program for Cultural Organizations Backed by a $1 million allocation from the Legislature, the Massachusetts Cultural Council will create a program of grants and technical assistance for cultural organizations considering the creation or expansion of endowments. The program will be designed to promote planning and financial stability among cultural organizations while helping them to think strategically about endowments, other financial goals and organizational stabilization.

And Beyond...

The new millennium brings with it opportunities and challenges in our goal of integrating culture into the core of Massachusetts communities. From the ongoing discussions about education reform to the continued development of partnerships among communities, business and private funders, the Massachusetts Cultural Council remains committed to the challenge of fostering a strong bond among the arts, sciences and humanities and the communities of people who comprise the Commonwealth.

p r o g r a m s

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts has been committed to supporting the arts, sciences and humanities for more than 30 years. The Massachusetts Cultural Council's funds are appropriated annually by the Governor and the Legislature—$14.7 million in fiscal year 1998. The agency also receives support from the National Endowment for the Arts—$516,400 in 1998. Grants and services are available to not-for-profit cultural organizations, schools, artists and communities for cultural activities that enrich the lives of people across the Commonwealth.

Grant recipients are expected to demonstrate both excellence and public benefit in their programs. Outreach to the community and to underserved groups—such as low-income families, people with disabilities, rural, bilingual and minority populations—are also criteria for funding.

Programs and services are provided through four departments: Communities, Organizations, Education and Artists. A complete list of 1998 grants is included in the accompanying booklet as part of this report.

communities

Each year, the Massachusetts Cultural Council distributes funds to every Massachusetts city and town through 336 local cultural councils, the largest grassroots structure of its kind in the nation. In 1998, $3.74 million was distributed using a local aid formula based on population and property values, giving priority to less-wealthy communities. In turn, local councils made 6,909 grants.

Attleborough Cultural Council LCC-Originated Grant

The Attleborough Cultural Council entered Phase II of its Balfour Riverwalk Sculpture Project in 1998. The city is creating a park on the site of a former factory building and the local cultural council is planning to create a permanent public sculpture for this new park. In the most recent phase of the project, artists were invited to create models of their proposed works for review by the community. The major portion of this year's grant will go towards the cost of creating the final sculpture.

Berlin and Winchendon Cultural Councils PASS Grants

In 1998, 26 Brownie troop members from Berlin and 25 Girl Scouts from Winchendon attended educational programs at the New England Science Center in Worcester, along with several other groups of school-age children from around Worcester County. These are just two examples of 1,527 PASS grants made for school trips that enrich student appreciation and interest in the arts, sciences and humanities.

Lawrence Cultural Council LCC Grant

Immigrant City Archives celebrated its 20th anniversary in 1998 with a series of offerings designed to increase their visibility within the Lawrence community. Local residents attended workshops on a variety of topics that included oral history and preservation techniques. Local artisans also demonstrated early methods of working with wood and metal. In May and June, students and teachers were specially invited to tour a historic exhibit and familiarize themselves with the resources available in Lawrence.

New Marlborough Cultural Council LCC-Originated Grant

While evaluating the impact of local grants on the community, the New Marlborough Cultural Council noted that adults did not have the same access to local arts instruction as the town's children. The council contacted the Flying Cloud Institute, a local nonprofit providing arts workshops for children, about offering instruction for adults. Several local artists taught free adult workshops in visual arts and crafts during May, with the results displayed in the community over the 1998 Memorial Day weekend.

In Massachusetts, where the competition is so keen for the private dollar and our corporate and foundation sources are no match for those of the other large industrial states, there is a special case to be made that government funding is critical to sustaining the edge of quality and excellence fostered by our cultural community.

organizations

Hundreds of outstanding cultural organizations call Massachusetts home, including nationally and internationally recognized groups in a variety of disciplines. In fiscal 1998, the Massachusetts Cultural Council allocated $7.3 million to almost 500 organizations. These funds support the MCC's core program for cultural organizations—Organizational Support—as well as targeted initiatives such as YouthReach and Science in the Community.

Higgins Armory, Worcester Organizational Support

The Higgins Armory presents the history of arms and armor through its collection and special exhibitions. Its collections include objects from Medieval and Renaissance Europe, feudal Japan, ancient Greece and Rome, as well as Africa, the Islamic world and India. The museum's extensive educational programs reach every segment of the Worcester community.

Fuller Museum, Brockton Organizational Support

Central to the cultural life of Brockton and southeastern Massachusetts, this museum collects, cares for and exhibits works of art by outstanding New England artists. It is especially committed to engaging community members of all ages and backgrounds through its exhibitions and extensive educational programs. Over 200 classes per year and the extensive network of collaborations with community institutions are important aspects of the museum's successful outreach.

Computer Clubhouse at the Computer Museum, Boston Science in the Community

Computer Clubhouse members receive an opportunity to work with adult mentors to create artwork, build Web pages, write and illustrate poetry and build kinetic sculptures and robotic constructions. One of 12 Science in the Community Programs, the Computer Clubhouse was a national semi-finalist for the President's Commission on the Arts and Humanities' "Coming Up Taller" awards.

Pakachoag Community Music School, Auburn Organizational Support

The Pakachoag Community Music School enriches the lives of central Massachusetts residents, from infancy through the retirement years, by providing quality music instruction, performance opportunities and public concerts at accessible cost. Although relatively small, the school offers an extensive community outreach program that includes early childhood music classes for minority, low-income and rural families.

education

The Massachusetts Cultural Council's educational programs bring together schools, artists and cultural organizations with the goal of stimulating imaginations, building critical and creative thought and providing teachers with professional development opportunities. The Council also works with the Department of Education to develop art curriculum frameworks required under the Education Reform Act of 1993.

In 1998, $425,000 was distributed through the Event & Residency program, which places artists in schools. The Education Partnership Initiative, launched in fiscal 1997, distributed $527,511 to encourage cultural organizations, schools and community groups to work to develop innovative arts-based curricula.

Curley Elementary School, Jamaica Plain Event & Residency Program

Dancer Nikki Hu and musician Guy Van Duser worked with teachers and students for four months creating music and dances that reflected students' understanding of insects and their life cycles. The final performance, which took place at the Curley School Science Fair, featured four dances, including, "What's Bugging You?" with music that integrated the recitation of original poetry created by the students.

Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, Lee Education Partnership Initiative

Educators from the Pittsfield Public Schools are collaborating with artists from Jacob's Pillow, the Berkshire Museum and A.B.C.D.E., Inc., in a professional development project that aims to integrate dance and the visual arts into a district-wide arts curriculum. Activities included a week-long summer teacher institute, followed by jazz-tap classes and group meetings throughout the school year. Teachers found tap to be a useful way to enhance learning, especially in math and verbal communication. The study of jazz-tap and its history led to explorations of other African cultural traditions in music and the visual arts.

New England Wildflower Society, Inc., Framingham Education Partnership Initiative

"Patterns in Nature and Art," a collaboration between the Wildflower Society, the Danforth Museum of Art, Framingham State College and the Framingham Public Schools, is developing educational programs that link visual art and the natural sciences to enhance the third grade curriculum. This partnership provides teachers with fresh ideas to expand the walls of their classrooms to include the cultural organizations' collections and resources. For example, during workshops at the Wildflower Society's "Garden in the Woods," teachers studied inquiry-based learning techniques first hand, then brought their classes for activities that included a scavenger hunt in which students observed and drew the patterns they saw in nature.

artists

The Massachusetts Cultural Council provides fellowships and grants to Massachusetts artists in various disciplines annually. In 1998, $850,500 was provided to artists through direct grants or through programs such as Event & Residency and the Massachusetts Touring Program which enabled them to bring their art directly to Massachusetts residents.

Marcus Halevi, Somerville 1997 Artist Grant Recipient, Photography

"This past year has been a period of unique growth and accomplishment in my career as a photographic artist. As a grant recipient, I had the unusual luxury of being able to explore my medium while maintaining a slightly higher level of freedom from the normal pressures that confront visual artists. Receiving this award means much more than the gift of time and materials. It is a form of affirmation that sustains the artistic spirit. It is our society saying 'yes' to the importance of the arts. It is encouragement to continue the struggle."

Teresa Pfeifer, Chicopee 1998 Artist Grant Recipient, Poetry

"The grant will help make child care available for my children. I will have the monetary resources to submit my work more frequently to contests and publishers. I will also be able to purchase necessary journals and literature. My habit of making poems requires a kind of solitude of spirit. I look forward to the financial permission the grant provides that inner life."

Elizabeth Loudon, Amherst 1998 Artist Grant Recipient, Fiction

"This grant...will buy me what I've most longed for: time for fiction. For the first time in 15 years I will place writing at the center of my professional life. This grant has given me, in addition to the time needed to lay the groundwork for the long haul ahead, some vital confidence. That confidence in turn will...encourage me to write more swiftly and more directly, assured that I have something to say and readers to whom I can say it."

Kristina Madsen, Southamptton 1997 Artist Grant Recipient, Crafts

"Textiles are a valuable resource for inspiration. The patterns themselves, their layout, their combinations, their colors offer endless richness and diversity. The grant has allowed me to pursue this study of pattern within the context of my furniture with great concentration. It has sustained me while I have designed and built new work and has afforded me the time to fully develop and refine each piece. I am grateful to the Massachusetts Cultural Council for supporting and encouraging me in this pursuit."

partnerships

Partnerships open doors to financial and human resources, information and networks which the Massachusetts Cultural Council could not open or create on its own. By reaching out to private industry and funders, the Massachusetts Cultural Council builds another link to the communities that make up Massachusetts. Four of the agency's current partnerships are:

Massachusetts Cultural Facilities Project (MCFP) A partnership with New York's Nonprofit Facilities Fund and the New England Foundation for the Arts. The MCFP offers advisory services, planning grants and low-interest loans to promote a strategic approach to development of cultural facilities. The MCFP became operational in 1995 and has received investments of $2.5 million from the Massachusetts Cultural Council and $1.5 million from the Nonprofit Facilities Fund.

Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) Mini-Grants A partnership with Very Special Arts Massachusetts, launched in 1993. The ADA Mini-Grants Program supports efforts by cultural organizations to make their programs fully accessible to people with disabilities—helping them to go beyond the minimum physical accessibility requirements of the ADA. The program has been cited as a model by the National Endowment for the Arts and has been replicated in several other areas of the country.

New England Foundation for the Arts (NEFA) The New England Foundation for the Arts is a regional grant-making organization that raises money from national, state and local funders in support of cultural programs. In addition to the Massachusetts Cultural Facilities Project, the Massachusetts Cultural Council and NEFA jointly sponsor grant programs for individual artists, including the Massachusetts Touring Program.

Massachusetts Foundation for the Humanities (MFH) A partnership with the Massachusetts Foundation for the Humanities to promote public programs in the humanities, including literature, history and philosophy. With major funding from the Massachusetts Cultural Council and the National Endowment for the Humanities, MFH provides grants and organizes conferences, lectures and discussion programs for the public.

commonwealth award recipients

The Commonwealth Awards are the state's highest honors in the arts, humanities and sciences. Begun in 1993, the awards are given every two years in recognition of both the well-known and the unsung heroes who help to improve our quality of life.

"I see things differently
than I did before.
I learned to get along with other people.
You see, I am an only child;
I learned how to work
with other people...
how to make new friends.
I have always had strong opinions;
the video allows me
another way to express myself."
